GROW A READER

Make sure you have reading materials everywhere in the house, whether it's books, magazines, word games, or even catalogs.

Discuss the story together. Ask questions, try to brainstorm more story ideas, talk about the characters.

Use your finger to trace the words as you read so your child learns how written language works: left to right and top to bottom.

Have regular reading time in your child's day, whether during breakfast, after school, or before bed. Even a few minutes of reading will improve your child's skills and love of the written word.

Children learn from what they see—be a good reading role model and let your child see your love of books and reading!

Once your child can understand a story, bring it to life. Act it out, play characters, have props—anything to make reading pure pleasure.

Start from the very beginning, when your child is just a baby. Your little one will love the warmth and closeness long before she can understand the words.

Pre-readers will love Fancy Nancy storybooks. The colorful and fun-filled illustrations are sure to spark lots of interest!
